Course Materials

The required text for this course is Krause, Elrod, Oldham, Family Law: Cases, Comments, and Questions (8th ed., 2018) (ISBN:978-1-68328-451-2). Supplemental materials also will be distributed. A schedule for the semester is included at the end. You are responsible for all cases and materials assigned, regardless of whether each part of that assignment is specifically covered in class.

If your intention is to become a practitioner in the area of family law or if you just have an interest in a particular area, you may access Florida practice forms at: http://www.flcourts.org/gen_public/family/forms_rules/index.shtml . You might also consult <http://www.flcourts.org/> or <http://www.floridasupremecourt.org/>. Other states have similar databases if you intend to practice in a state other than Florida.

There will be an in-class participatory assignment which will constitute 25% of your grade and one out-of-class assignment which will constitute 10% of your grade. Materials in support of these assignments will be distributed at an appropriate time in the course.

Class Participation

Class attendance and class participation are mandatory. Students will be called on randomly in each class. Participation on one day will not shield you from participation on the next. All students are expected to be prepared to field questions, especially those concerning basic doctrine and "black letter" applications. In addition, students should focus on understanding the broader theoretical implications and policy issues underlying the "black letter" applications. You should expect to be called on more than once during the semester.

If you miss class for any reason, you must discuss your absence with me. You must not miss more than three classes for any reason. Barring extenuating circumstances, refusal to comport with these requirements may be harmful to your final grade. I retain the option of lowering your grade by as much as a half grade (no more) for poor class attendance or participation. I also have the option of raising your grade by as much as a half grade (no more) for excellent participation. In extreme cases, you may be removed from the course.

You should view class participation as an important part of your learning experience. Class is your opportunity to experiment with the materials before you are evaluated on them. Volunteered answers in class are always welcome. Family law is necessarily a policy-laden course; broad participation in class will assist you in grasping the intricacies of the potential policy issues and choices.

Religious Holy Days

The University of Miami, although a secular institution, is determined to accommodate those students who wish to observe religious holy days. Classes missed due to observances of religious holy days will count as excused absences only if you provide written notice of your intended absence(s) to me no later than the end of the first three meetings of our class.

Use of Personal Technology in the Classroom.

You are best served during class period if you focus on class discussions and lectures. Furthermore, the classroom environment must support learning for all students; technological devices may be distracting to individuals in the class and thus undermine that goal. Accordingly, in addition to other professional conduct and the corresponding courtesies, please refrain from text messaging; instant messaging; e-mail use; use of cell phones (disable them in class); or any other communication devices. Also refrain from displaying wallpaper, screen savers, or other material on your laptop screen reasonably expected to offend or distract your classmates. It should also be understood that games (electronic or otherwise) are inappropriate for the classroom. I will sanction any student who interferes with the general learning environment in the class. Such sanctions may include, but are not limited to, the loss of the privilege to use a laptop in my class, individually or collectively.

Final Examination

There will be a final examination at the end of the semester. The final will consist of several parts and will cover both “black letter” issues and policy choices.

If you have a disability, or suspect that you may have a disability, the Law School encourages you to contact Disability Services at the Office of Disability Services for information about available opportunities, resources, and services: telephone number 305-284-9907; email address disabilityservices@law.miami.edu.
